I am glad to see that he appears to be on better terms with the horse this term, without losing his fresh enthusiasm.

There has been less 'hot air' this term, but I fear that test results confirm that he is weak and that he will find it difficult to reach an A-level pass standard. He does not seem to be able to learn for himself from the question book & much of his thinking is muddled with intuition playing a bigger part than logic. He must check answers against those given, he must provide reasoned explanation of how those answers arise - & he must read his textbook in step with the course.

My thanks for his cheerful participation in the house play: he looked very decorative in the performances.

On occasions he has shown a lively interest and made a positive contribution to the work of the Set. I particularly liked his Imaginative Composition.

He is keen as ever, but he still does not do himself justice. He must learn to direct his energies.

His written work must improve, but his recent Test result was extremely encouraging.

He always attempts to participate in class discussions with commendable results.

Is improving all the time. His solutions are generally well argued and he shows a keen ~~and~~ interest in all aspects of the subject. Should do fairly well at this rate.
