J. C.R.Collis.

He has completed a good first year. I fancy that his approach to certain subjects needs a little more "bite" if he is to be fully successful, and he might think about this before next term.

His marks still are not good, but he shows an increasing understanding of the subject. Regrettably I do not feel that he is quite ready for the AD Exam.

He is a thoroughly nice guy who is always offering information, answers and comments - some of which are correct. He is a participator and this makes life easier for the teacher. He seems to be understanding the principles and this will help enormously next year.

Good - he has dealt well with all aspects of the course so far - at this rate there is no reason why he should not get a good grade next year.

He is slowly improving & I see a glimmer of hope where his A-level chances are concerned. Much will depend on how much reading round the topics he is doing & unfortunately I see little evidence of that. He hasn't got much background knowledge on which to build.

Seems to have confidence now with using the language. I think he could probably hold his own in conversation.

He has worked well and has seemed interested in this term course.

It is not easy to find one's place in a house when one enters halfway through, but he has done it. Reading is an activity which he must take more seriously, whether it is for Physics or SAT. English - I doubt if he has started Hemingway yet.
